3 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

PAUL RYAN DISTANCES HIMSELF FROM TRUMP MUSLIM BAN

1 House speaker Paul Ryan, the top U.S. elected Republican, on Tuesday distanced himself from presidential candidate Donald Trump's proposed ban on Muslims from a variety of countries in a further sign of establishment unease with Trump's agenda. Trump gave his first speech on the Orlando, Florida, massacre Monday, a day after the attack at a gay nightclub that was the deadliest mass shooting in U.S. modern history.The New York mogul said if elected Nov. 8, he would temporarily suspend immigration from areas of the world where there is "a proven history of terrorism." In a subsequent tweet, he said he was referring to "nations tied to Islamic terror." REUTERS

JUROR IN STANFORD SEX ASSAULT TRIAL: 'JUSTICE NOT SERVED'

2 A juror in the Stanford University sexual assault case wrote to the judge expressing his disappointment over what was seen by many as a very lenient sentence handed down to former student-athlete Brock Turner. Santa Clara County Superior Court Judge Aaron Persky is facing a recall campaign following public anger over his decision to sentence Turner, 20, to six months in jail for sexually assaulting an unconscious woman after a party. The juror, who requested to remain anonymous, said he was disappointed and "vehemently" disagreed with the June 2 sentence, according to the letter, which was posted online late Monday by the Palo Alto Weekly newspaper. Prosecutors had sought a six-year prison term for Turner after he was convicted on three felony counts of sexual assault for the January 2015 attack. REUTERS

RUSSIAN SPIES HACK US DEMOCRATIC PARTY COMPUTERS

3 Russian government hackers penetrated the computer network of the Democratic National Committee and gained access to the entire database of opposition research on Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump, the committee and security researchers said Tuesday. The intrusion is emblematic of the sophistication of Russian hackers, who have long been viewed by intelligence officials as the most talented of U.S. adversaries in cyberspace. Florida Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz, chairwoman of the Democratic National Committee, confirmed the breach to Reuters. It was first reported by the Washington Post. REUTERS

Trendy Philly nabes

A side-by-side neighborhood comparison of median rents in the two cities.

LEN MANIACE

Though New York's been winning the baseball rivalry between the Mets and the Phillies lately, when it comes to bargains on rental apartments, Philadelphia comes out on top.

New York City neighborhoods considered working-class only a decade or two ago now outprice apartments in some of Philadelphia's poshest sections, according to data provided by NeighborhoodX, a real estate research and analytics startup.

For instance, the median monthly rent for a one-bedroom apartment in gentrifying but still-gritty Long Island City in Queens was $2,900, well above the $1,900 figure for Philadelphia's long-fashionable Rittenhouse Square and Logan Square residential districts. Comparable neighborhoods where New York's elite might be drawn are Manhattan's Upper West Side, with a median one-bedroom rent of $3,600, or classic brownstone Brooklyn Heights, where one-bedroom rents aver-

Millennials want NYC, but

Perhaps millennials don't know what's best for them.

In a recent survey, one in five Gen Y-ers said New York is their ideal city, with fewer than 1 percent saying the same of Philadelphia. But research has shown that Philly has outranked its more metropolitan competitors when it comes to qualities millennials say they value.

Abodo, an apartment-search site, surveyed 2,000 people born between 1982 and 1998. Respondents were asked to rate 20 qualities, including a thriving job market, rent and housing market affordability, presence of hiking trails and quality of pizza, on a scale of one to 10, from least to greatest importance.

Despite common assertions that millennials are "lazy" or have "lesser work ethic," the top three qualities Generation Y values most are economic in nature: a thriving job market (8.19), affordable rent (7.94) and affordable home prices (7.55), followed by parks or hiking trails (6.52) and nonchain local restaurants (6.49).

When asked to pick a city they thought was the best choice, nearly 20 percent chose New York City. San Francisco came in second, with 10.3 percent, and one in 10 chose the Pacific Northwest, with Seattle and Portland each fetching just above 9 percent.

PHILLY RANKS NO. 17 AMONG CITIES IN WHICH MILLENNIALS MOST WANT TO LIVE

Philadelphia rang in at No. 17 with 0.89 percent, far below Los Angeles, Chicago, Boston and Washington. When analysts broke down the preferred city of each gender and age group, New York ranked No. 1 across all ages and both genders. Philadelphia was found to be in the Top 10 only among respondents aged 18-22. The city actually came in 10th.

Ironically, Philadelphia hit 95 percent of millennials' criteria, according to Abodo's cheaper than gritty NYC ones age $3,100.

For those seeking a neighborhood with a young, creative vibe, New York's traditional answer has been the East Village, with Williamsburg gaining street cred the last 20 years. In Philadelphia, there's Fishtown.

This working-class neighborhood of narrow streets and row houses has sprouted studios, galleries, bars, restaurants and music venues. While the median one-bedroom in Fishtown rents for $1,600, those apartments in Williamsburg and the East Village go for the nonbohemian figures of $3,200 and $2,900, respectively.

Fishtown is even a bargain compared to Staten Island's St. George area, where the ferry docks and median one bedrooms go for $1,800 a month.

Demand is a factor in NYC's pricey pads. New York is growing much faster than the City of Brotherly Love. In two decades New York's population rose by 1.2 million people to 8.55 million in 2015, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. In the same time, Philadelphia's population rose by 71,000 to 1.57 million. Put another way, New York City added enough people to fill up three-quarters of Philadelphia.

That doesn't mean there aren't relative bargains in New York, only that they are further from Midtown's jobs, the city's cultural attractions and even basic amenities, such as supermarkets.

Mott Haven in the Bronx is one such area, where a median one-bedroom goes for $1,500 a month. Much of the housing is in tenements and New York City public housing developments.

But Mott Haven also has three historic residential districts and some sections of the neighborhood are showing signs of gentrification.

Housing is being renovated and new shops opening, including that harbinger of change, gourmet coffee shops. Two opened since April.

One needn't go so far, nor do without as much, in Pennsylvania's biggest city. The median one-bedroom rents for $1,100 in Spruce Hill, a neighborhood just west of University City, a cluster of academic institutions which includes the Ivy League University of Pennsylvania.

Philly is better compiled research. New York City, Boston, Washington, Portland and Seattle all tied at No. 2 with 90 percent.

Based on its research, Abodo found Philly to have a good job market, affordable rent and home prices, quality pizza, walkability, an LGBTQ-friendly community, quality public transportation and a lake, river or beach nearby. The only mark Philly misses is a highly rated public school system.

New York City, by contrast, was found to have neither affordable rent nor a highly rated school system. In fact, the only city determined to have a quality public school system was Seattle.

It's not breaking news that rents in New York City and San Francisco are expensive, but it seems the rate keeps going up.

A study released last month by Smart Asset found residents in NYC need a six-figure salary to live comfortably: an average of $158,229 annually. By contrast, Philadelphians can live comfortably on a $65,100 salary. ALEXIS SACHDEV

Sheetz vs. Wawa: The results are in

Will the oldest rivalry in history finally be laid to rest? Probably not.

ALEXIS SACHDEV
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

Some rivalries, like Pat's vs. Geno's and dog lovers vs. cat people, may never end.

In Pennsylvania, one such rivalry has stirred "tribal loyalties," igniting emotion and anger from all corners of the state: Which is the better convenience store, Sheetz or Wawa?

Public Policy Polling conducted a survey on the important issues: background checks for firearm purchases, opinions on Chip Kelly and which convenience store reigns supreme.

Pennsylvanians have spoken: 45 percent of respondents prefer Sheetz, while just 35 percent think Wawa wins. Another 20 percent aren't sure. (They probably never even experienced Hoagiefest.)

But could the numbers lie?

Wawa's Facebook page has 1,321,429 likes. Sheetz trails at 1,295,242. But Sheetz has more than double the Twitter followers as Wawa (305,157 to 155,853).

Wawa was voted the best convenience store in America; Sheetz came in third, according to Market Force Information.

Sheetz CREATIVE COMMONS

But Wawa's cult-like following is no secret. So much so that Mashable glimpsed into the tight-knit community of Wawa devotees in a piece simply titled "The Cult of Wawa."

"I think it's just kind of like the all-American store," customer Paula Turnbach told Mashable earlier this year. "It's like, apple pie and Wawa, you know?"

Then there was that guy who took an engagement photo shoot with a hoagie.

That said, Sheetz might beat Wawa at its munchies game. Looks like the rivalry continues, after all.

MURDER

Man sentenced to 22 to 44 years for murder of transgender woman

A man will now face 22 to 44 years in prison after pleading guilty to the fatal stabbing of a transgender woman in North Philadelphia last year.

Raheam Felton, 32, stabbed London Kiki Chanel, 21, in a rage after learning the young woman told his girlfriend, key witness Mayai Bankz, that he had been "sexually touching her," Philly.com reported.

The attack happened after Felton returned with some Chinese takeout to the North Ingersoll Street apartment where Chanel lived.

Chanel later died at the hospital from multiple stab wounds in her neck, chest and back, on May 18, according to the report. At the time, Felton reportedly told police an unknown assailant had attacked her.

"She was such a sweet person," Chanel's aunt, Dimitria Washington, reportedly told the court during victim impact statements. "She would give anything. What did she do that was so wrong?"

Raheam Felton HANDOUT

Chanel's family said she left Texas to live her life as a woman in Philadelphia, but had plans to return to Texas to reunite with her estranged family.

"I didn't understand, but the world changes and I had to learn to change with it," Veronica Allen, Chanel's mother, reportedly told the court. "I knew Marcus, but I didn't get to know London, the beautiful woman she became. [Felton] took that from me."

Year after West Philly flood, locals still live with the damage

Some residents say they haven't received any compensation for effects of burst 130-year-old water main.

sam.newhouse@metro.us

Last year, Anita Lewis shows how far the water rose in Smitty's Millcreek Bar the day after the water main break. At right is Deborah Smith, owner, standing on Tuesday in Smitty's Millcreek Bar a year after the water main break. CHARLES MOSTOLLER

The effects of a burst water main that flooded homes and businesses around 52nd and Wyalusing is still being felt by some residents, one year later.

"To date, I've not been reimbursed," said Deborah Smith, 58, the owner of Smitty's Millcreek Tavern, which saw water up to the edge of the bar during the flood on June 14, 2015. "We closed for seven months. I can't even tell how much business I lost because of that."

Smith was one of many residents in the area who were swamped last year when a 130-year-old, 36-inch-diameter pipe burst early on a Sunday. The same area was previously flooded in 2004 and 1994.

Steve Waddy, 69, who lives around the corner from Smith's Tavern, saw his basement bedroom filled with water during the flood. All of his clothing, furniture and appliances were ruined, including cartons of stamp and coin collections. His collection of swords were rusted, and three cockatoos he kept as pets died.

"A year later, it's still a mess. I feel like I'm living in a Third World country," said Waddy, a former Marine who served in Vietnam. "This really tore me apart."

Waddy produced a city letter from May offering him about $27,000 as compensation. He said he has already paid $20,000 to replace damaged possessions, and estimated full repairs to the home could cost him up $100,000 more.

Smith produced letters from the city showing an offer of about $55,000. Minus $19,000 in liquor taxes for 2015, she said,

She estimated she sustained $100,000 in losses. She added that she paid out of her own pocket to replace the floors, equipment in the bar, and beer and liquor stock in the basement. The tavern reopened in February.

According to Barry Scott, deputy director of finance for risk management, the city has settled 76 claims arising from the flood, and 21 remain open.

"We are still working actively with those folks to help them move on so this is no longer a drag to their lives," Scott said. But he added the process has been complicated, with some homes seeing change in ownership, and new claims related to the flood being filed as recently as last week.

But both Waddy and Smith, who obtained lawyers to assist with their claims, said the claims process was confusing and difficult. Both described Water Department staff carting out their waterlogged possessions after the flood, then requesting a full list of the tossed possessions as part of the claims process.

"It was a struggle," Smith said. "I'm just grateful to still be here."

Cops: Wawa store robbed twice by same suspect

A man in a hooded sweatshirt with white socks on his hands is wanted for multiple robberies.

The suspect PROVIDED

Philadelphia police are looking for a man they believe robbed a Wawa convenience store on two separate occasions.

The first robbery occurred on June 8 at 9:30 p.m. at 10550 Knights Road.

Police said the perpetrator placed his hand on a 22-year-old female employee's back and said, "Give me the money and open the register." Surveillance video caught the thief escorting the employee behind the counter where she opened the cash register and gave the suspect an undisclosed amount of money. The man subsequently fled the scene in an unreported direction.

Watch video of the robberies at metro.us

The suspect is described as a white male, 25 to 30 years old, between 5-foot-11 and 6 feet, He was wearing a gray hooded sweatshirt, black Nike pants, had white socks on his hands and black Nike sneakers.

The second incident occurred five days later on June 13 at 10:42 p.m. at the same Wawa location, police said. Surveillance video caught an unknown man armed with a knife entering the convenience store and walking behind the counter demanding that the 45-year old male employee open the cash register. After stowing away an undisclosed amount of money, the suspect left the store and was last reportedly seen on Knights Road heading toward Frankford Avenue.

The description of that suspect was similar to the one in the June 8 incident — a white male, 6-foot-1 and weighing 185 pounds. He was wearing a dark colored hooded sweatshirt, black Nike pants, white socks on his hands, and black Nike sneakers.

Anyone with information about the robberies or the suspect is asked to contact the Northeast Detective Division at 215-686-3153/3154.

If you would like to submit a tip about the robberies please report it by dialing 215-686-TIPS (8477), or by sending a text to PPD TIP or 773847.

The Philadelphia Police Department urges you to contact 911 immediately if you see the suspect and to not approach him.

Woman hit by SEPTA bus in Chestnut Hill dies

A 76-year-old woman struck by a SEPTA bus in Chestnut Hill last week has died from her injuries.

Elizabeth O'Malley died on June 11, police announced Tuesday.

O'Malley and her 50-year-old daughter were walking on Germantown Avenue crossing Gravers Lane around 4:19 p.m. on June 9 when a SEPTA bus turned left, striking both women with the bus's front left tire, according to police.

The women were transported to Albert Einstein Medical Center, where O'Malley was listed in critical condition with "bleeding on the brain" and broken ribs, according to police. Her daughter was in stable condition with injuries to her left hand and knee.

O'Malley succumbed to her injuries two days after the crash.

"It's a tragic incident," said SEPTA spokesman Andrew Busch, who declined to comment on specifics. "We're awaiting the outcome of the investigation."

Woman killed in Northeast Philly hit-and-run

Police are investigating a hit-and-run incident in Northeast Philadelphia that left one woman dead late Monday night.

Police said 17-year-old Markalyah Jackson, who was crossing Adams Avenue at Roosevelt Boulevard in the Crescentville neighborhood, was killed when a speeding minivan ran a red light and struck her, knocking her about 200 feet down the road.

The incident occurred around 11:30 p.m. The driver then fled the scene northbound on the Boulevard.

Jackson died from her injuries, police.

Witnesses said the woman was on her cellphone while walking at the crosswalk, according to NBC10.

Philadelphia Police Chief Inspector Scott Small told NBC10 that the driver will be found.

"The driver of that vehicle struck someone and killed them and left the scene," Small said. "They have to turn themselves in because they are going to get caught." ALEXIS SACHDEV

Driver smashes into South Street shop, injures 4

Four people were sent to the hospital with possible broken limbs Tuesday morning after a vehicle smashed through a Primo Hoagies on South Street.

Police are investigating how the driver, a 21-year-old woman, jumped the curb on the 300 block of South Street and subsequently struck a group of people around 1 a.m., NBC Philadelphia reported. The car then struck Primo, shattering a glass panel.

The victims, three men and a woman, were rushed to Jefferson University Hospital in stable condition, with possible broken arms and legs, Philadelphia Police Chief Inspector Scott Small said.

The driver and her passenger stayed on the scene and spoke to investigators, Small told NBC10.

Police said they don't expect to file charges.

Obama, Clinton criticize Trump for proposed ban on Muslims

Obama and Hillary Clinton made nearly simultaneous speeches responding to Trump, who is soon to become the Republican Party's presidential nominee.

President Barack Obama lambasted Donald Trump's proposed ban on Muslim immigrants in an angry denunciation of the Republican presidential candidate's response to the Orlando nightclub massacre.

The president and Hillary Clinton, the Democrat he has endorsed to succeed him in the Nov. 8 general election, made nearly simultaneous speeches responding to Trump, the New York mogul who is soon to become the Republican Party's presidential nominee.

Clearly annoyed, Obama used a speech at the Treasury Department to respond to Trump's proposed suspension of immigration from countries with a "history of terrorism" in response to the killing of 49 people early on Sunday in Orlando, Florida. The gunman was U.S.-born Omar Mateen, 29, whose parents immigrated from Afghanistan.

The president, without mentioning Trump by name, dismissed the Republican's criticism of Obama for not using the term "radical Islamic terrorism" to describe Islamic State militants. Obama called the phrase a political distraction.

"What exactly would using this label accomplish, what exactly would it change?" Obama said. "Someone seriously thinks we don't know who we're fighting? … There's no magic to the phrase 'radical Islam.' It's a political talking point."

President Barack Obama speaks at the Department of Treasury in Washington, D.C., on Tuesday. GETTY IMAGES

"We now have proposals from the presumptive Republican nominee for president of the United States to bar all Muslims from immigrating to America. We hear language that singles out immigrants and suggests entire religious communities are complicit in violence. … Where does this stop?" President Obama

Obama, who canceled a joint appearance with Clinton planned on Wednesday in Wisconsin due to the events in Orlando, appeared to be enjoying his role in the campaign to select his successor. He tangled with Trump in 2011, producing his birth certificate to refute Trump's claim that the president was not born in the United States.

Clinton, Obama's former secretary of state, addressed supporters in Pittsburgh. The candidate said Trump's proposal bolstered her case that he was temperamentally unfit to serve as president, saying the commander in chief "is a job that demands a calm, collected and dignified response" to events like the Orlando massacre.

Clinton noted that Trump seemed to suggest on Monday in a television interview that Obama might have somehow been responsible for the deadliest mass shooting in modern U.S. history, a point that Trump said he did not make.

"I have to ask: Will responsible Republican leaders stand up to their presumptive nominee or will they stand by his accusation about our president?" she said.

The biting criticism was likely to increase the discomfort among many establishment Republican leaders about Trump with little more than a month until party figures gather in Cleveland to formally nominate him. REUTERS

US probes reports that Orlando shooter was gay

Investigators were digging into what motivated a Florida man to slaughter 49 people at a gay nightclub, including evidence he had become absorbed in militant Islamist ideas and reports he might have struggled with his own sexual identity.

Investigators have said Mateen was likely self-radicalized and there is no evidence that he received any instruction or aid from outside groups such as Islamic State. Mateen was a U.S. citizen, born in New York of Afghan immigrant parents.

"He appears to have been an angry, disturbed, unstable young man who became radicalized," President Barack Obama told reporters after a meeting of the National Security Council.

One official familiar, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said investigators are only beginning to delve into the contents of Mateen's cellphone and other electronic devices. The source said they believe Mateen browsed militant Islamic material on the internet for two years or more before the shootings.

A defiant fist is raised at a vigil for the worst mass shooing in United States history. GETTY IMAGES

Mateen's wife attempted to talk him out of the attack, NBC News reported on Tuesday, citing officials familiar with her comments to the FBI.

Soon after the attack, Mateen's father indicated that his son had harbored strong anti-gay feelings.

He recounted an incident when his son became angry when he saw two men kissing in downtown Miami while out with his wife and young son.

Angel Colon, who was in Pulse with friends at the time of Mateen's attack, described hearing gunfire and falling to the floor, shot in the left leg.

"I couldn't walk at all," Colon told a reporters at Orlando Regional Medical Center, where he is one of 27 survivors being treated. "All I could do was lay down. People were running over me."

Colon said he had a hopeful moment when Mateen went into a bathroom — where he later took hostages — but the gunman then emerged, systematically making his way through the club shooting people who were already down, apparently to ensure they were dead.

US court backs landmark internet equal-access rules

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit backed the FCC's so-called net neutrality rules put in place last year to make internet service providers treat all internet traffic equally.

A U.S. appeals court Tuesday upheld the Obama administration's landmark rules barring internet service providers from obstructing or slowing down consumer access to web content, dealing a blow to big cable and mobile phone companies.

The rules prohibited broadband providers from giving or selling access to speedy internet, essentially a "fast lane" on the web's information superhighway.

In siding with the FCC, the court treated the internet like a public utility and opened the door to further government internet regulations.

The ruling was a big victory for President Barack Obama, a strong advocate of net neutrality rules who has said the internet long has been organized around principles of openness, fairness and freedom without gatekeepers or "toll roads."

But the fight may not be over. The internet services providers that sued to block the regulations said they would appeal either to the full appellate court or to the Supreme Court, and telecommunications industry groups said they would redouble efforts to get Congress to limit the FCC's authority.

Opponents of the regulations said the FCC exceeded its authority and condemned the ruling as an endorsement of investment-chilling public-utility regulation.

Net neutrality is a major issue for broadband providers like Verizon, Comcast and AT&T, which fear the rules may make it harder to manage internet traffic and make investment to provide additional capacity less likely. GETTY IMAGES

Democrats in Congress praised the ruling. But Sen. John Thune, a South Dakota Republican who chairs the Commerce Committee, said the decision upholds FCC "restrictions designed for the monopoly-telephone era." He said the Republican-led Congress needs to step in to overturn a decision that results in "a highly political agency micromanaging the internet ecosystem."

The ruling boosted the FCC in its bid to complete action on major internet privacy rules before the end of the year.

FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler said the "ruling is a victory for consumers and innovators who deserve unfettered access to the entire web, and it ensures the internet remains a platform for unparalleled innovation, free expression and economic growth."

Led Zeppelin's 'Stairway to Heaven' goes on trial

Robert Plant and Jimmy Page GETTY IMAGES

Led Zeppelin singer Robert Plant and guitarist Jimmy Page appeared in a Los Angeles court for a civil trial that opened Tuesday in which they are accused of stealing the opening chords of their 1971 classic "Stairway to Heaven" from another band.

Plant, 67, and Page, 72, did not speak to each other or their lawyers as they appeared in federal court. Both sported long gray hair and Page wore three-piece suits.

The lawsuit alleges that the opening chords of their song was stolen from the 1967 instrumental "Taurus" by the band Spirit.

U.S. District Judge Gary Klausner in Los Angeles said in April that a jury might find "substantial" similarity between the first two minutes of "Stairway" and "Taurus," and to let it decide whether Plant and Page were liable for copyright infringement.

Trial in the case was set to begin Tuesday with jury selection, followed by opening arguments.

The lawsuit was brought by Michael Skidmore, a trustee for the late Randy Wolfe, also known as Randy California, Spirit's guitarist and composer of "Taurus."

Skidmore said Page may have been inspired to write "Stairway" for Led Zeppelin after hearing Spirit perform "Taurus" while the bands toured together in 1968 and 1969, but that Wolfe never received credit. REUTERS

USED CARS as low as $999

FRED BEANS REPEATS HISTORIC USED CAR SALE

Doylestown, PA – Fred Beans, CEO and founder of the Fred Beans Automotive Group located in Doylestown, PA, has announced a ONE DAY SALE on Saturday, June 18th at 9:00AM. Due to an overwhelming public demand, vehicles will be sold for as low as $999.*

Cars will be clearly marked, so come early for the best selection. This is a ONE DAY ONLY sale designed to get the local community driving again.

Fred Beans' pre-owned inventory levels need to be reduced to make room for shipments of new models arriving daily. As a result, all 9 Fred Beans Doylestown locations are selling these overstocked pre-owned vehicles to the public at drastic discounts in an attempt to clear excess inventory.

Along with this huge variety of pre-owned vehicles, the Fred Beans Family of Dealerships in Doylestown features new Ford, Lincoln, Mitsubishi, Dodge, Chrysler, Jeep, Hyundai, Nissan, Subaru, Chevrolet, Cadillac, Buick, GMC, and Volkswagen vehicles.

Fred Beans believes reviving the economy starts at home, and changing things locally will lead to changing things nationally.

In addition to the Fred Beans Family of Dealerships' extra inventory, additional vehicles have been acquired at incredible prices for this sale from various banks, repossession companies, auto auctions, credit unions, lease companies, and rental companies.

The sale will make pre-owned vehicles available for as low as $999,* prices not normally offered to the general public. According to Fred Beans, "We want to give our customers a reason to believe in the local economy again. Someone has to look out for their best interest."

Customers are encouraged to arrive and register by 8:15AM to inspect the entire inventory and find the car that's right for them. Every vehicle will be cleaned, detailed, and fully prepared for instant delivery. On the evening of June 17th, after the close of business, Mr. Beans and his team will mark the special sale price on each and every vehicle. Because Fred Beans' customers are feeling the credit crunch right now, the Fred Beans Automotive Group has given the dealerships' financing managers the resources necessary to get most customers' credit approved on the spot.

The Fred Beans Family of Dealerships has $10 million in lending power, the result of over 50 years of strong relationships with the area's leading lenders. This means that customers with a less-than-perfect credit history can have their credit approved and drive home a quality pre-owned car, truck, or SUV by lunchtime on Saturday.

Even if a customer's credit report shows a bankruptcy, divorce, tax lien, slow payment history, missed payment, or repossession or if a customer is a first-time buyer, Fred Beans may get them approved.

This special ONE DAY ONLY sale will be held at all 9 Fred Beans Doylestown locations this Saturday, June 18th at 9:00AM.

Pre-owned vehicles will be sold for as low as $999.* Customers are encouraged to arrive and register by 8:15AM for the start of inspection. Incredible sale prices, starting as low as $999,* will be posted no later than 8:00AM. All vehicles will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis. The Fred Beans Family of Dealerships is expecting a high volume of customers for this sale, so be sure to reserve your spot early.

Customers wishing to trade in a vehicle are asked to bring their title or payment book for immediate delivery. Fred Beans will even pay off your trade-in in full, no matter how much you still owe on it.†

Most of these surplus pre-owned vehicles will get sent directly to auto auctions for liquidation. So if anyone has been thinking about purchasing a good, clean, dependable pre-owned car, truck, van, or sport utility vehicle, don't miss this special ONE DAY ONLY sale.

Courtesy transportation is available from all local airports, train stations, and bus depots.

Is this Justin Bieber's new GF?

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

It looks like Justin Bieber isn't just loving himself these days.

The 22-year-old pop singer reportedly flew "Transformers 4" actress Nicola Peltz out to visit him in Canada, where he is on tour. The two were photographed getting into a car together in Toronto. "Justin and Nicola are definitely dating and it's really heating up," an insider told HollywoodLife.com.

Though they've been keeping their meetings on the down low, this isn't the first time Bieber has been linked to the 21-year-old actress. They were first spotted getting dinner together in Beverly Hills back in May.

Given that the Canadian heartthrob will be on the road for his "Purpose" tour until the end of November, it might be difficult to get him to settle down for now — though this problem probably isn't anything a few more plane tickets and secret meet-ups couldn't fix.

Spousal support? No, thanks, says Amber Heard

Amber Heard has withdrawn her request for $50,000-a-month spousal support from estranged husband Johnny Depp. The actress originally filed the declaration with her initial divorce request, but was declined. According to court documents obtained by E! News, Heard, who was accused of making false claims for cash, says the original monetary request was "used against me to distract and divert the public away from the very serious real issue of domestic violence."

Heard's temporary restraining order against Depp is set to bring the two to court Friday for a hearing, after which the actress's lawyer says she is free to refile for support. The "Danish Girl" star filed for divorce May 23, with claims of physical and psychological abuse from her husband of 15 months. Following the restraining order hearing, Heard's attorney told E! she could seek up to a "maximum of 30 months for spousal support" due to their short marriage.

Someone stole $500K from Kevin Hart

Comedian Kevin Hart is not laughing. The actor was robbed of goods worth half a million dollars over the weekend, reports TMZ. Hart's California home is located in a heavily gated community with two guards, but that didn't stop the thief from prying open the backdoor and stealing jewelry, clothing and other personal items. This all happened while Hart and his family were in Miami promoting his new movie "Central Intelligence." When the actor returned home, he noticed the theft and contacted authorities. Police do not believe it was an inside job and are reviewing surveillance footage to find more information. This is the fourth celebrity robbery in the last month; Kanye West, Black Chyna and Scott Disick have also been victims. Looks like Hart needs some "central intelligence" to crack this case.

Shia LaBeouf embarks on hitchhiking expedition

Don't be alarmed! The rugged bearded man standing on the side of the road is not a homeless person — in fact, it's none other than "Even Stevens" star Shia LaBeouf. And this time it seems as if he's taken his role in "Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull" a bit too seriously.

But why? LaBeouf is hitchhiking through the U.S. for the sake of "art."

The "Transformers" leading man and artist pals Nastja Rönkkö and Luke Turner started their adventure in May. The trio have hit cities in Utah, Detroit, New Orleans and Pennsylvania. On Sunday night, LaBeouf was spotted on a boat in Manitowoc, Wisconsin. Earlier this week he was seen making his way through Minnesota. Let's not forget, this is for art, people.

So how does one find Mr. LaBeouf? It's simple: A set of GPS coordinates are posted via his Twitter, @thecampaignbook, then the three friends wait for someone to pick them up. Their trip is being covered by internet hipster news outlet Vice and can be followed by visiting takemeanywhere.vice.com or with hashtag #takemeanywhere. Just yesterday, the ticker was making its way along Interstate 90, where LaBeouf was cruising through Minnesota into South Dakota.

Frances O'Connor gets her own fright night

An acclaimed actress gets the chance to scream a lot in "The Conjuring 2."

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

Like most of the cast of "The Conjuring 2," Frances O'Connor is not a horror actor. She's an acclaimed thespian, the star of 1999's "Mansfield Park" as well as Steven Spielberg's "A.I.," the 2002 take on "The Importance of Being Earnest" and the show "The Missing," for which she scored a Golden Globe nomination.

But like co-stars Vera Farmiga and Patrick Wilson, she found shooting James Wan's second haunted house grinder to be artistically fulfilling. O'Connor, 48, plays Peggy, the harried low-income mother of four whose English council home is (allegedly!) terrorized by an evil spirit.

As a parent it must be rough getting in the headspace that Peggy goes to — not just trying to protect her kids from potentially supernatural forces, but being so brash.

I really hope I'm a better parent. [Laughs] Peggy's not really PC in the way she parents. But she is a '70s parent: She's always stressed, she shouts at her kids, but ultimately she loves them so much and would protect them with her life. There's a scene where I give my son cookies before he goes to bed, which is such a parenting no-no. I love that she does stuff like that.

You've mostly done dramas and had only done one horror film, "Mercy," before this. Were you itching to try this type of film?

Not really. It's kind of fun to go, "Oooh, let's see what being in this genre is like." But ultimately I feel it's all the same. You're still telling a story, though perhaps in a more technical way.

Frances O'Connor, left, plays a low-income English mother whose kids are allegedly terrified by an evil spirit in "The Conjuring 2." WARNER BROS. PICTURES

As an actor used to characters, how did you adjust to something that's often so technical?

The scene where I'm woken up by the kids screaming and the drawers go slamming across the room — that was all one take. So it felt like it was really happening. It makes your job easier, because you can react to what's happening at the moment. There are other moments that are very artificial and you have to generate it. You have to really concentrate and come up with the goods.

Real or make-believe?

The real-life Enfield Haunting is a hotly contested case, with skeptics pointing out inconsistencies, even fakery. Where do you stand having made a movie about it?

The producer got a hold of the guy who took those photos [during the alleged haunting]. He thought there was something genuinely happening in the house. Even if it wasn't supernatural, it was maybe a kinetic force. There's so much weight on both sides of the argument that it's hard to know if it really happened.

It can be tough being coldly rational when you're confronted with traumatized people who claim they've encountered something paranormal.

Those kids, now as grown-ups, are still kind of freaked out. That event has affected the rest of their lives. Some of the footage and the photos and all these audio recordings, it's really spooky-looking and listening to them. I don't know. I can't say definitively whether it happened or not. It's very convincing if it's not true.

Andorra gets ready to rock the

The local band has won the opening performance slot a second year in a row.

JENNIFER LOGUE
jennifer.logue@metro.us

Every year, Radio 104.5 scouts Philadelphia for a local band to open its massively popular birthday show at the BB&T Pavilion in Camden, a venue holding 25,000 people. For the second year in a row, Philly alternative rock band, Andorra, has won the coveted spot opening for the Lumineers, Elle King, Florence and the Machine and more. We chat with lead singer Kevin McCall about the tremendous opportunity, the band's middle school beginnings and his "Game of Thrones" doppelganger.

So how does it feel to be playing the Birthday show for a second year?
We are very fortunate to be able to do it again. A lot of great things happened from our last performance.

Who are you excited to meet?
I'm really excited to meet Florence. It's going to be like seeing Disney World for the first time. She has a magical element to her. The atmosphere she presents in her songs has an enchanted vibe about it. I also am excited about Elle King. Apparently she went to UArts so it would be cool to meet her.

Do all the band members in Andorra go to UArts?
No, just me and Dante. Michael goes to West Chester and Jordan goes to Drexel. We are all going to be juniors in the fall.

It's hard to believe you guys are still in college and you've achieved so much already. How did the band get started?
Andorra was this idea that our drummer Jordan and I had. We went to St. Helen's in our middle-school years and talked about this band during recess in sixth grade. We kept playing together and had different members over the years, but now in college, we've really made our way. We picked up Dante [on guitar] and Michael [on bass and vocals.]

Wow! That's a lot of history for a band. Talk about staying power. Why the name Andorra?
We were friends with this guy named Bill who lived in Andorra, a suburb. We hung out with him a lot there and liked the name. At the time it was the best thing we could come up with so we stuck with it. I guess it's all thanks to that guy! [Laughs]

Who would you say are your biggest influences?
For me, Bob Dylan has always been a big influence as a lyricist. I'm really into Modest Mouse right now and the Foo Fighters, too. Those have always been our go-to bands.

So I've gotta ask. Has anyone ever told you that you look like Jon Snow from "Game of Thrones?"
[laughs] Yes. Plenty of times.

Does it annoy you when people say that? Are you a fan of the show?
Not at all. I did not see Sunday's episode, but I absolutely love the show.

OK, I won't give away any spoilers! So what is Andorra working on right now?
We're putting out a new video for a song called "Four Corners." We're doing it in a boxing ring. It's going to be at a gym in Chester, where they did some of the last Rocky movie. Our friend Nathan Martin is directing it.

What's the song about?
A lot of the themes for our upcoming album have to do with being at home, where you're comfortable being yourself. I think it comes from me moving out of my parents' house for the first time. Cooking for myself and I'm not very good at it. [laughs]

Cooking what?
Peanut butter and jelly, honestly.

It's impossible to mess that up — a winning combination. So where do you see Andorra in three years?
I hope they'll just invite us to play the Birthday Show three years from now instead of us winning a contest [laughs]. We always talk about touring but it's been hard with our schedules. No other city is as good as Philly for music. We like it here. [Pause] If Josh Hommey could produce our next album, that would be awesome.

Emmanuelle Delpech is a 'Spinning Immigrant'

Emmanuelle Delpech as Wonder Woman in her new show, "Spinning Immigrant." CÉDRINE TRESCA

In her new show at FringeArts, Delpech explores the immigrant experience through DJing.

A.D. AMOROSI

It's funny that French-born, local performance artist, clown and occasional Pig Iron Theatre Co. collaborator Emmanuelle Delpech is basing her newest work, "Spinning Immigrant," on her experience (and that of 16 other immigrants) of naturalizing to become an American citizen. "I have my passport, but I don't know if I feel like an American," says Delpech who emigrated to Philadelphia in 1998 and obtained citizenship in 2014. "I don't know all of America's parts. I do, however, feel Philadelphian, you know? I am Philadelphian."

Her FringeArts show, "Spinning Immigrant," discusses the process of naturalization — the vows one takes in renouncing the commitments and values of the country you were born in, in order to fully become a U.S. citizen.

"For instance, I can't fight in the name of France," she says with a laugh. "It is about the spirit of America, the beauty of which is that anyone can become one just as I did." Delpech interviewed immigrants from Afghanistan, Italy, Africa, Albania, Vietnam, Ireland, Germany, Mexico and other countries — "people with perspectives different than mine" — to discuss the process of becoming. She taped responses about their journey, some from people who "don't overthink the process of naturalization, despite struggle or loneliness" to come up with one great endpoint: that home is where the heart is. "We might not be completely whole here, but we're happy."

The voices of immigrants and the sounds of their native lands are wound throughout "Spinning Immigrant" courtesy of Delpech's newest skill — DJing. To learn this art, she went to Chestnut Street's Scratch Academy where she learned from Philly DJs Cosmo Baker and Rich Media how to rock rhythms and match vocal samples to beats.

"It was really hard and I'm not very good, but I get the job done," she laughs. The fact that she can reinvent herself though, at age 43, as a DJ? That is a true metaphor for the American experience.

Delpech wanted to get away from characters with "Spinning Immigrant," despite her longtime association with being a clown for inventive pieces from her past, such as Red Noses. "I wanted to be more natural, intimate and less reliant on the physical. Plus, I really got into sound, music, voices." Delpech began to focus on her real life experience as an immigrant and that of other immigrants from diverse cultures who came to America, either by choice or by circumstance. "I have a connection with all immigrants."

The only character she does play however is American comic book hero, Wonder Woman. "Ah, she was always my ideal," says Delpech of wearing the gold lightening bracelets and the red-white-and-blue one piece. "I used to watch her when I was a kid. She was beautiful and strong and could save people. I think I use her as my clown persona, my shadow character, in 'Spinning Immigrant,' especially as I think she is funny. Wonder Woman was everything I wanted to be."

LOVE WHERE YOU LIVE

Real estate, as they say, is all about location, location, location.

But life, or course, is never that simple, especially when family is involved. These days, even the four-legged members get a say.

In a recent survey, the American Pet Products Association found that 44 percent of households in the U.S. own at least one dog, and the market is responding.

In California, Standard Pacific Homes offers a 170-square foot "pet suite" — complete with a bathing station, laundry facilities, a flat-screen TV and dog-run access — as an option in its Orange County development. Manhattan high-rises have been catering to pet owners for years, although amenities like the Mercedes House's Canine Club — with "cage-free" doggie day care — are changing the game. While an on-site doggie spa may seem a little extreme, taking your pet's needs into consideration is a smart move. "More and more, my clients bring up their pets," says interior designer Nan Ruvel, who has created everything from specialized mudrooms for messy pups to custom litter-box "bathrooms" for cats. "And I encourage that. You really want to make sure the space works for the entire family."

Be realistic

Like children, animals put some limitations on decor. "With pets, it's important to be realistic, and I make sure my clients understand that," says Ruvel, who shares her home with two cats and two dogs. Her tip: "No wall-to-wall carpet."

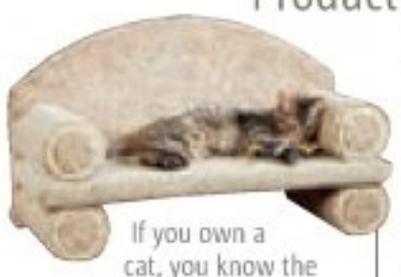
Fabrics are key

Many a couch has met its demise at the claws of a scratch-happy cat. But if you shop smart, you can extend the life of your furniture. "Most people think the durable fabrics are better, but whenever you have a nubby weave, that's something claws will hook into, and leather tears very easily," says Ruvel. "Cheaper fabrics, especially microfibers, are easier to clean and hold up better to pets."

Make a floor plan

Accidents happen, which is why wood floors have long-been the gold-standard for pet owners. "Choose a hard wood, and avoid anything too dark that will show scratches easily," advises Ruvel. If you can't quite give up your carpets, Ruvel recommends opting for wool.

Product picks



If you own a cat, you know the deal: Your possessions are, at all times, subject to its whims. Providing a scratching alternative — especially one that's more fun to destroy than your love seat — may save your furniture. Pet supply company Drs. Foster and Smith offers products selected by veterinarians, including this couch-shaped scratching post.

Inside look: 4 breathtaking homes with exposed brick

These are giving us serious apartment envy.

ALEXIS SACHDEV
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

Exposed brick: It's the ultimate in "cool" and is endlessly versatile. With its warm palette and raw style, exposed brick can become modern, industrial, rustic or shabby chic with the right furniture and accents.

For those who don't live in a renovated warehouse apartment with original brick walls dating back to the 1850s, there are alternatives: stencils, DIY drywall and wallpapers.

But these four homes take away the work. See the versatility of brick, as it makes an accent in living rooms, wraps around fireplaces and warms kitchens as a backsplash.

618 S. Hancock St. PROVIDED

719 N. Third St.

Walk into this charming three-story home in the heart of Northern Liberties, and you'll immediately be drawn to its modern rock-face fireplace made to look like brick. The $499,000, four-bedroom house also boasts a finished basement and a deck with a perfect skyline view.

4107 Ludlow St.

This two-bedroom spot feels more like a cabin in the woods than a West Philly townhouse, with its dramatic brick walls and exposed wood beam ceilings. At $250,000, this sunny home offers gorgeous wood cabinetry in the kitchen, original wood flank floors and a large backyard.

246 Fitzwater St.

Located steps from the Delaware River Waterfront, this apartment offers panoramic views of the city and a modern twist on industrial decor. If its clean lines and open floor plan don't sell you, its walk-in closets and custom-designed sleek bathrooms and kitchens should. At a cool $1 million, New York living comes to Philly.

618 S. Hancock St.

Built in 1915, this four-bedroom, four-bathroom townhome combines the old and the new. Soaring exposed brick walls in the living room give way to a newly renovated kitchen. At $949,000, this Queen Village home comes with a wet bar on the third floor, a roof deck and a finished basement.

Everything you need to know about Zach Eflin

Despite his struggles Tuesday, Eflin is a promising prospect for the Phillies.

KYLE PHILLIPPI
@MetroPhilly
sports@metro.us

A 5-2 mark with a 2.90 ERA and 5.0 strikeout-to-walk ratio up in Lehigh Valley was good enough to get Zach Eflin a call-up to the Phillies.

With Vince Velasquez on the shelf for 15 days, Eflin, acquired in the Jimmy Rollins deal, will get at least a few starts to show the big league eyes what he's capable of. His first coming on Tuesday.

Aside from his impressive Triple-A numbers, there's more to Eflin.

He's now the Phillies baby on the roster

At age 22, Eflin will be the youngest player on a team featuring plenty of fresh faces. The previous leaders in the clubhouse were Tyler Goeddel, Maikel Franco and Aaron Nola all at 23. Goeddel, born in October, held about a two-month advantage on Franco. Eflin was also the third-youngest pitcher in the International League with the IronPigs.

His sinkerball fools batters

At 6-foot-6, Eflin can get some power from his windup. So when he goes to throw his sinker, he can really get some movement on it as evidence by the opposition hitting just .199 against him. He once induced 13 groundballs, a season-high, in seven scoreless innings on May 19.

He was the "prospect to be named later" in the Matt Kemp to San Diego deal

Back in 2014 during the winter meetings, the Los Angeles Dodgers shipped Matt Kemp to San Diego for Yasmani Grandal, Joe Wieland and a prospect to be named later. The latter would turn out to be Eflin. At the time, the right-hander had played two minor league seasons, posting a 7-7 record with a 3.02 ERA between rookie ball and Single-A.

His youth was filled with tragedy

In an ESPN.com story, Eflin opened up about his childhood. In 2012, he told ESPN's Brandon Parker that, "my mother was an alcoholic, so my dad thought baseball was a good way to do some father-son bonding and give me a break from the environment." That was a result of tragedy that struck his family in 1995 when his grandfather passed away followed by his 7-year-old sister who was lost due to complications from leukemia. That all happened when he was less than 2 years old.

He was set to go to UCF

A native of Orlando and a graduate of Paul J. Hagerty High School in Oviedo, Florida, Eflin had committed to his hometown college, the University of Central Florida. He was set to go there until he was selected with the 33rd overall selection in the first round of the 2012 MLB draft by the San Diego Padres. With a $1.2 million signing bonus coming his way, Eflin headed to the Arizona League to begin his major league career.

Will Zach Eflin be able to carve out a career in the majors? GETTY IMAGES

BRIEF

Phillies' Zach Eflin pounded for nine runs in MLB debut

Hello, Zach Eflin, and welcome to MLB.

The Phillies' 22-year-old rookie walked to the hill for the first time as a Major League ballplayer and left before he completed three innings Tuesday, as the Phillies fell to the Blue Jays 11-3.

Eflin gave up three homers, including a grand slam to Josh Donaldson. He walked three and allowed nine runs on nine hits. It's an afternoon he hopes he can soon forget.

It's also a road trip Philly wants to forget, after dropping four of five (and three in a row in a sweep by the Nationals).

The Blue Jays and Phillies will each travel south to Citizens Bank Park where the two will continue their home-and-home series in Philly Wednesday at 7:05 p.m. Jeremy Hellickson will get the call for the Phillies.

Union look to continue unbeaten streak

The Philadelphia Union face NYCFC at Yankees Stadium this weekend.

JEFF MCMENAMIN
@Jeff_McMenamin
sports@metro.us

Saturday's match against New York City FC will be played at Yankee Stadium, and will air on the Comcast Network at 1 p.m. GETTY IMAGES

June has been a big month for soccer in the city of Philadelphia. As the United States Men's National Team won Group A and advanced to the quarterfinals of the Copa America Centenario Saturday in a 1-0 win over Paraguay at Lincoln Financial Field, the Union (6-3-5) return to regular season action atop the Eastern Conference (23 points) on Saturday against New York City FC (4-5-6).

The Union entered June on a high note, topping the Columbus Crew (3-5-5), 3-2, on the first of the month to give themselves a little breathing room in first place entering the break. They know how important stretching that gap is moving forward.

"You can see a group of guys that push, aren't scared, give every ounce of energy, represent the city of Philadelphia and are playing pretty good soccer right now," manager Jim Curtin said, following the Union's win over Columbus. "I'm a big believer in the table tells the truth. At the end of the day we're where we are because we put a lot into it. It is still tight in the East. It's going be tight the whole year. So, we're not satisfied. We'll continue to push."

The story all season has been the sensational play of the rookies on the team. Against Columbus, it was the No. 6 overall pick in the 2016 draft, Fabian Herbers, who netted his first career goal on a beautiful strike to the upper 90 of the net to solidify the Union victory. Curtin talked about Herbers' talent following the win.

"He has a knack for running, losing his center back, being in the right spot at the right time," Curtin said. "So, he gets slipped in there on his weaker foot to have the composure to know that the center back's only play there is to slide, he cuts it back to his strong foot and puts it in a pretty good spot [chuckles], to say the least. So, he has things that I can't teach. I don't take credit for any of that, that's for sure. He is special around the goal."

The Union have also kept their unbeaten streak alive. The team has gone 3-0-5 in its past eight matches and will face the team who started it all in their next match.

Back on April 23, the Union bested New York City FC, 2-0, to push the team into first place in the East. Fifty-six days will have passed when the two square off on Saturday.

"We are a team, I think by the true sense of the word we are a team," Curtin said. "I've said it before, we came out today on the field, everybody is asking now, 'Who is the leader of this group?' Or, 'When the game gets tough, who is your guy that steps up?' I think I have 11 guys that will lead, and 11 guys that will step up, when the game starts."

Aries Plan a relaxing vacation or devote some time to a loved one. Making personal adjustments will lead to a positive plan or a new adventure.

Taurus Ask and you shall receive. Let your intuition and experience guide you when it comes to advancement. Don't let anyone saddle you with responsibilities that don't belong to you.

Gemini Put your plans into motion. Use your power of persuasion to entice others to see and do things your way. Love is in the stars, but temptation will lead you astray.

Cancer Show restraint when asked to keep a secret if you want to avoid damaging your reputation. Concentrate on a creative endeavor or improving yourself or your home.

Leo If you look for a way to help, you will discover a new way to use your skills in a more diverse manner. You will enjoy feeling needed. Romance will enhance your life.

Virgo Observation will be necessary if you want to avoid a scandal. Don't get caught in a position that will make you look bad or incompetent. Bide your time.

Libra If you give your all, you will get the same in return. Good fortune is around the corner socially, emotionally and financially. A romantic gesture will encourage a positive change.

Scorpio Let your emotions lead the way when it comes to personal matters today. An unusual lifestyle change will help you obtain a lifelong dream.

Sagittarius Serious talks can help smooth over a misunderstanding or disagreement, but honesty will be required in order to bring about the changes you desire.

Capricorn Finish what you start and clear your agenda so you can enjoy some downtime with friends and family. Sharing your ideas will result in support and encouragement.

Aquarius A chance to step into the limelight is apparent, but it must be handled graciously. Stick to facts and realistic promises. Personal gains look promising.

Pisces Honesty is the best policy when dealing with friends and family. An interesting partnership will be enticing, but you need to iron out the details before you commit. EUGENIA LAST
